

Participant Journal

Fresh Start is a program that pairs individuals under courtordered supervision with volunteer mentors from local churches in Pinellas County. The purpose of the program is to reduce recidivism by offering guidance and support to clients to help them successfully meet the requirements of probation and, more importantly, have a fresh start.

Completing your journal each week will help you identify topics that your mentor can help you work through. You are not required to share any or all of your journal entries with your mentor, but communicating your successes and obstacles will help your mentor focus their attention on your unique strengths and needs. You will get out of this what you put into it. We hope that you find your mentoring experience worth your time and effort.

Meeting #5 Stress Reduction

Stress is caused by good and bad events in our lives. Marriage, divorce, the birth of a child, the death of a family member, getting fired, getting an award, going to jail, and getting a new job are among the top 25 things that cause stress in our lives. Stress can affect our health, our outlook on life, and how we interact with others. Although we can't avoid everything that may cause us stress, we can manage our stress by making sure we get enough sleep, eat well, exercise regularly, and take time to relax every day.

What is currently causing you stress?
Some physical signs of stress are rapid heartbeat, tense muscles, nervousness, sweaty hands and feet, difficulty sleeping, low energy, headaches, upset stomach, dry mouth, clenched teeth, and even frequent colds or infections. How do you know when you are stressed? What are your physical signs?
Stress can motivate us to improve our situation (like when a car is coming and we quickly get out of the way), but when we are under stress for a long period of time, it can affect our mental and physical health. We may notice we are irritable, moody, feel overwhelmed, have difficulty concentrating or relaxing, and prefer to be alone. How do you react to stress? What are your emotional signs?

Read through the following list of activities that help people prevent and manage stress. What do you already do? What are you willing to try?

Stress Management	I do this		I'll try it
Sleep 7-8 hours a night Eat a balanced diet Limit caffeine Do something to relax each

Put a reminder on your calendar this week to do something that will help you manage stress.

Meeting #6 Decision Making

Every decision we make has consequences, whether big or small, positive, negative or neutral. When we have a big decision to make, or a small one that may have big consequences, it is important to take some time to think about our options first.

Meeting #7 Recovery

When people say they are, "in recovery," they often are referring to alcoholism or drug addiction. It can also mean overcoming a habit, learning to live with a chronic medical condition or mental illness, or healing from a past hurt or trauma. To be in recovery means to decide to face a personal challenge with the goal of minimizing the impact the challenge has on one's life and well-being.

[&]quot;I have told you these things, so that in Me you may have peace. In this world you will have trouble. But take heart! I have overcome the world." John 16:33 (NIV)

Meeting #8 Balance

One important part of managing stress is taking care of the physical, emotional, social, mental and spiritual parts of ourselves. If all we do is work, it may help our finances, but we will feel stressed because we are neglecting other important aspects of ourselves.

Meeting #9 Relationships Part 1

People in healthy relationships respect each other, treat each other with patience, admit when they are wrong, and practice forgiveness. Healthy relationships do not just happen; they take work.

Your relationships may have been affected during your criminal behavior, when you were arrested, if you were in jail, and now that you are on probation. People that you love and care about may be angry, scared, disappointed, frustrated or find it hard to trust you. Fixing relationships can be hard to do, but if you want someone in your life, then it's worth the effort. Restoring trust takes time. You will have to be open, honest and patient until trust is restored.

Talking to friends and family and giving them permission to honestly share their feelings is one important step to restoring relationships. This can be very uncomfortable. If you find yourself feeling defensive or angry, try self-talk. Remind yourself that the relationship is worth it, and refocus on what the person is saying. If you can, thank them for their honesty. This may sound strange, but you will find that it is one way to let the person know you are listening and that their feelings are important.

Who are yo	relationships that you have a common treat open and honest with, treat common caring toward, and trust?
Explain ho	w you contribute to healthy re	elationships.

Meeting #10 Relationships Part 2

Last week you listed relationships you want to keep or restore. Keep in mind that actions speak louder than words.

- Give people time to see that you respect them.
- Try to keep a positive attitude.
- Do your best to take responsibility for wrongs.
- Be open and honest without being hurtful.
- Try not to dominate the relationship. Find out what the other person wants so you can share decision making and compromise when you disagree.
- Do not manipulate others to get what you want.
 People don't like being manipulated, and it usually involves lying, which affects trust.
- Be an equal partner in your relationships. Playing the victim or being passive is unhealthy.

Ways to show you care:

- Help someone and expect nothing in return.
- Give someone a compliment or encouragement.
- Spend time with someone (talk, play a game, eat, or teach them something).
- Listen.

What relationships are a challenge right now? Why are these relationships important to you? What is it going to take to keep them? Maybe you need to work on your relationships with your children or an unhealthy adult relationship. Clues that a relationship is not healthy include secrets, dishonesty, selfishness, disrespect, and a lack of trust.

Meeting #11 Relationships Part 3

How we communicate makes a difference in our relationships. The words we say and how we say them send a message. You can say the exact same words in many ways depending on the volume and tone of your voice, your facial expressions, and your body language.

Are you a good listener?

- I pay attention when someone is talking.
- I don't plan what I'm going to say next while someone is talking.
- I make eye contact, smile and nod when listening.
- I ask questions when I'm not sure what someone means.
- I stay on topic.

Are you a good speaker?

- I clearly state what I mean.
- I am respectful even if I disagree or need to assert myself.
- I use a respectful volume, tone and speed.
